LME Week is nearly here! Virtual and afternoon tickets still available

In-person morning tickets for the LME Metals Seminar on Monday 9 October in London have now sold out. However, don't miss out on the opportunity to join us virtually for the day, or in person for the afternoon!

If you are not in town, then you can always buy a virtual ticket. Tickets for the afternoon sessions are free.

What's on guide

LME Week: What's on guide

LME Week attracts thousands of members of the global metals community to London and is not just about the LME Metals Seminar and LME Dinner. There are many events hosted by our colleagues in the industry, many of which are listed below:

Closing Prices update

Last month we announced we are evolving the way we calculate Closing Prices by expanding the use of volume-weighted average prices (VWAPs) for our most liquid contracts.

The changes are designed to make the methodology for Closing Prices more deterministic, transparent, representative and objective.

Black History Month: Ring extravaganza

To kick off Black History Month (BHM) we were privileged to host an event on the Ring with Barbadian cricketer Sir Gordon Greenidge MBE and other guests from the Windrush generation who shared their rich and often challenging life experiences.

We were also introduced to an amazing charity called “Driven By Us” whose mission is to help people succeed in motorsport regardless of their gender, colour and ethnicity.

NTP Platform Update Forum: 19 October, 14.00 (BST)

On Thursday 19 October at 14.00 (BST) we are giving key middle and back-office stakeholders a virtual update on the launch of our new trading platform, LMEselect v10; new GUI, LMEtrader; and new data platform, LMEsource v4.

The forum, which this time around focuses on conformance and go-live readiness, is for LME members, their clients, ISVs, data vendors and connectivity providers who have, want or facilitate direct (and indirect) access to LME trading.
